AECOM wins two contracts from the San Francisco Unified School District totaling approximately US$10 million

LOS ANGELES (July 2, 2012) — AECOM Technology Corporation (NYSE: ACM), a leading provider of professional technical and management support services for public and private clients in more than 130 countries around the world, announced today that it has been awarded two major contracts by the San Francisco Unified School District (SFUSD) that, combined, total approximately US$10 million.

Under the contracts, which are part of the district's Proposition A 2011 Bond program, AECOM will support school building improvements, including facility modernizations; accessibility, life safety and seismic upgrades; and infrastructure and maintenance improvements.

The first contract involves the sole award for program planning and design management services where an AECOM team of architects, engineers and program managers will provide the district management support for building assessments and early design phase work. For the second contract, the company will continue providing construction management services.

"We are honored to continue working with this important client in support of its mission to provide the children of San Francisco with the educational facilities they need to thrive," said John M. Dionisio, AECOM chairman and chief executive officer.

AECOM has been providing construction management services to SFUSD since 2007.
