Firms expands AECOM's presence in Europe

LOS ANGELES, May 10, 2010 (BUSINESS WIRE) --AECOM Technology Corporation (NYSE: ACM), a leading provider of professional technical and management support services for government and commercial clients around the world, announced today that it has acquired INOCSA Ingenieria, S.L. (INOCSA), a professional technical services firm with headquarters in Madrid, Spain.

INOCSA also has offices in the countries of Romania and Bosnia and a total of approximately 550 employees providing services to public and private clients. Its services include architecture, design, engineering, program management and urban planning.

"INOCSA's expertise in segments such as transportation - especially high-speed rail, which is a focus for us around the world - energy, environment and water make it a natural fit with AECOM's worldwide suite of services," said AECOM president and chief executive officer John M. Dionisio. "Its presence in Europe also positively grows our footprint on the continent. Conversely, our global platform will create new opportunities for INOCSA staff and enable new service offerings for its clients. We are delighted to welcome INOCSA to our global team."

"Joining AECOM positions us to expand our geographic reach and seize new growth opportunities as part of a global enterprise," said INOCSA Chairman Antonio Lorente del Prisco. "We look forward to bringing our expertise to AECOM, and the professional development opportunities for our staff that come with being part of a global industry leader. We are excited about the outstanding possibilities that exist for our clients and our employees as we join AECOM."
